TWO-DAY TRAINING WORKSHOP ON

“TERRORISM AWARENESS AND PREPAREDNESS”

1.1. BACKGROUND

The upsurge of terrorism and violent extremism in West Africa has since the past decade created instability and humanitarian crisis in the affected countries. Despite the national and international military operations to combat the threat, groups such as Boko Haram, Jamaat Nusrat al-Islam waal Muslimeen (JNIM), the Islamic State in the Greater Sahara (ISGS) and Ansarul Islam continue to threaten the stability of states in the region. With a grand strategic goal of controlling the entire West African region, the terrorist groups have in recent times expanded their unlawful activities beyond the Sahel and Lake Chad Basin region to the coastal areas along the Gulf of Guinea (GoG). The JNIM (which is made up of Al-Qaeda in the Islamic Magreb [AQIM], Ansar Dine, al-Mourabitoun and the Macina Liberation Front) for example, has on countless occasions called on its militants to mobilize for Jihadist cause not only in Mali but in Burkina Faso, Niger, Cote d'Ivoire, Guinea, Ghana, Senegal, Nigeria and Cameroon. However, with the exception of Ghana, Senegal and Guinea, JNIM and its affiliates have attacked most of the targeted countries.

Although Ghana is yet to experience any veritable terrorist attacks, the country's proximity to neighbouring countries such as Burkina Faso where JNIM and Ansarul Islam militants operate makes her vulnerable to attacks. The high influx of illegal migrants from neighbouring countries affected by terrorism, weak border control systems and the absence of the state in the border communities further makes the country susceptible to attacks. Recent intelligence information about possible terrorist attacks on churches in Ghana and the subsequent arrest of an armed Burkinabe in the Hamile Roman Catholic Church in the Upper West region shows how vulnerable the country has become to such threats. While Government is building the capacity of the security and intelligence agencies to respond to any possible attack, the larger population that is supposed to support Government efforts to counter the threat appears to be uninformed about the modus operandi of these terrorist groups and networks. Additionally, most of the media discussions about how Ghana can deal with terrorism have also not been comprehensive enough to provide the essential terrorism awareness and preparedness strategies needed to neutralised any potential attacks. It is against this backdrop that the West Africa Network for Peacebuilding (WANEP) is organising a two-day training Workshop on “Terrorism Awareness and Preparedness” to better equip stakeholders to prevent and disrupt any terrorist attacks.
