Since the early 1990s, Ghana has made a steady progress in the quest to consolidate democratic governance in its political landscape. Between 1992 and 2016, the country has successfully organized seven multi-party democratic elections which have culminated in three peaceful political transitions between the two major political parties – the New Patriotic Party (NPP) and the National Democratic Congress (NDC).